Husband and Wife

Beauty is the first requisite for a stenographer for my husband. She can be the worst dumb bell on earth, but if she "looks good" she can get by with him.—Bertha M. What Does Your Husband Do?

REPUBLICANS

Will you vote for a man who has repeatedly tried to wreck the Republican Party?
To nominate C. C. Young to head the party in California would be a disgrace.

He believes in no party principles.
He stands only for personal expediency.
He is a demagogue to call himself a Republican.
What is the record of C. C. Young who is seeking to become the standard bearer of the Republican Party in California?

He is the same C. C. Young who attempted to legislate the Republican Party out of existence in California in 1915.

He is a political turn-coat.
He is the same C. C. Young who during the 18 years he has been on the state pay roll—feeding at the public trough—has at various times been a candidate of the Progressive Party, the Prohibition Party, and wanted to be a man without a party—the candidate of the "no-party" state machine that was in full power in 1915.

And now he is back in the Republican Party fold.

On a motion of trustee Fred Lutz the plumbing inspector bond was transferred from Forrest Wright to the new plumbing inspector G. Blomberg.

CATHOLICS IN MEXICO WILL "STAND FAST"

Episcopate Declares That Degree of Calles Must Be Withdrawn to Bring Peace

(By Universal Service)
MEXICO CITY, Aug. 23.—The Catholic church of Mexico stands most firmly in its present position until the Calles decree of July is rescinded.

This official declaration by the Episcopate dashed optimistic hope that the struggle between church and state was nearing amicable settlement.

There will be no settlement by compromise; the church will not yield any of its rights; priests will not re-enter the churches until the Calles regulations have been withdrawn or the legislature has revoked the constitutional provision which made these regulations possible.

The declaration to carry on the struggle with no thought of compromise followed a meeting of the Episcopate with Archbishop Mora y del Rio the venerable prelate who heads the church in Mexico.

Carl Oelze, veteran flyer will take off in a machine carrying "Wings," the parachute, fifty feet in diameter. At an elevation of 6,000 feet he will stall his motor and attempt to float the airplane to earth by means of the "chute."

VALENTINO ANSWERS LAST CURTAIN CALL

Body of Screen Idol May Lie in State in Famous Gold Room in New York

(By Universal Service)
NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The body of Rudolph Valentino screen idol of millions who is mourned by the entire nation will probably lie in state for three or four days in the Gold Room of the fashionable funeral parlors in Broadway where it was taken after his death at noon today.

A conference will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning at which time the film star's associates will decide whether the public—the thousands of Valentino admirers—will be permitted to view the body, or whether just a few of his friends will be allowed to view the mortal remains.

Before being placed in a coffin the body was embalmed with a special fluid as were the bodies of Caruso and Lenin which will not only check decomposition for thirty days if the body is kept in the open but which will preserve it without show of decay for twenty years if kept in a vault.

If the body is ever laid out in state it will be exposed in the famous Gold Room of the Campbell Undertaking parlors, the room where other mighty figures of the stage and screen, Oscar Hammerstein, Anna Held, Nat Goodwin, Martha Mansfield, have been seen for the last time.

None could say tonight where Valentino will be buried but it will probably be either in his birthplace in Italy or in Los Angeles. This matter will not be decided until the arrival of Umberto Guglielmo, Valentino's brother.

Imbach was greeted most enthusiastically in each place, and much additional support was volunteered him.

CITIES MAY COMBINE ON NEW ARTERY

Recent Ruling of Supreme Court May Permit Parallel
For San Pablo Avenue

Acting authority with the recent decision of the supreme court in regard to inter-city construction of boulevards, a meeting for the improvement and extension of Panhandle boulevard has been called for September 19.

It is planned to extend this street through the Richmond Annex and Albany to Berkeley and connect it with Pullman avenue in Richmond. Mayor Stringer of Albany has called the meeting for the purpose of forming one district to construct the boulevard.

At the recent convention of the California League of Municipalities it was announced that a test case presented to the supreme court showed that the cities had the right to band together as an improvement district for the construction of boulevards connecting cities, though located in different counties.

Councilman E. J. Garrard in making a report to the City Council last night on the league convention said that this matter of him was one of the most progressive steps taken in years by the cities. While the decision permits the cities to band together it also saves time in completion of the work and is a considerable saving to the residents.

In the past construction of roadways connecting several cities had been delayed by one or the other. By this measure, the work can be constructed as one job.

In speaking of the proposed extension of Panhandle boulevard, the council expressed its interest and agreed to be present at the meeting.

Panhandle boulevard, extended, would afford another traffic artery from Berkeley to Contra Costa county, and considerably reduce the hazards of heavy traffic on San Pablo avenue.

Police Court Has Busy Month

There were two cases dismissed; there are twenty-three cases pending and one operator's license was suspended. Fines paid and bail forfeited amounted to $545.

EDUCATION AND AGITATION

Every now and then someone of more or less prominence rises to tell us we have too much education. The burden of the lament of such worthy persons usually is that the country as a whole and many individuals would be better off if more young men eschewed college degrees and learned a good trade, say that of plumber, carpenter or brick-layer. And it must be admitted there often is a basis of truth in this argument, desirable as education may be, considered academically.

But if the complaint against excessive distribution of the college sheepskin in some instances is well founded in Continental United States where industry, commerce and almost every other form of human activity is highly developed, there would seem to be even more ground for it in the so-called "dependencies" or "possessions." A case in point is the agitation for independence which has been going on in the Philippines virtually without interruption since the American occupation, and which has just resulted in the sending of Col. Carmi Thompson as personal representative of President Coolidge to investigate conditions in the islands.

Whether one takes the attitude that full and immediate independence should be granted the Philippines, or that such action should be delayed until the Philippines "are better prepared to administer their own affairs," there apparently is no disputing the fact that the campaign for freedom is being carried on by a relatively small group of more highly educated men who have difficulty finding employment for their talents in any other field. One may look upon such persons as Quezon and Osmena as opportunists and professional agitators, or as patriots and fearless leaders, but one also well may imagine the ranks of the agitators would be considerably thinned if opportunities for proportionate distinction were offered in the various professions or even in commercial life.

A clever, well educated young Filipino drifts naturally to politics because with his training and environment, he is unwilling to embark upon what seems to him a menial career, in the absence of dignified and remunerative professional and commercial positions such as are abundant in the United States.

Nor is it in the Philippines alone that observers have remarked similar phenomena. Men of wisdom and long experience with affairs in Porto Rico have noted that with schools turning out native graduates more rapidly than commercial and professional opportunities for the display of their talents are developed, the tendency is for the well educated young man to go into politics, and to agitate against the government in power, often without much regard for the merits of the agitation. Indeed, this criticism would seem to hold for political agitators of many Latin American countries as well.

And to take an example farther from home, it is the young Chinese often educated in the United States through the remission of the Boxer indemnity, who is the bulwark of the present anti-foreign agitation in China at the present time. Such agitations often are justified, no doubt, but one can't help wondering if needed changes couldn't be accomplished more gradually and more effectively, if a modest amount of attention were given to education along some more practical lines of business or professional work.

Americans are said to be about as popular in Paris as General Andrews would be at a bootleggers' picnic.

One Good Term Deserves Another - By Gale

What's In A Name?

Henry means "home ruler" or "the head of a house." It appears in different variants in many lands. Henry, although not of English origin has been one of the most popular of English names. It has been largely used among Teutonic peoples also, and it appears to have been derived from the Norse word Heimdal, meaning home ruler, the old German Heimrich is almost identical with it.

It is uncertainly where the name Heinrich first was used, but it sprang into fame with the Saxon Emperor called The Fowler, and as his descendant won the honors of a Saint, the name speedily became a special favorite in Germany. Six emperors have been so named.

From the Kaisers the third Capetian King of France was called Henri, a form always frequent there but used by only a few Kings.

William the Conqueror must have named his youngest son for the French Monarch, from whom the first Plantagenet received and transmitted it to his ungracious son and then to his feeble grandson, through whom it descended to the elder House of Lancaster. It was revived in the House of Tudor.

A now well known young attorney tells this one on himself: "Having just hung out his 'shingle' he was patiently waiting his first client."

Suddenly hearing a knock at his door he decided to make an impression. So calling "come in," he turned quickly to the phone and began the following conversation:

"Yes, Mr. Fox, I will attend to that at the earliest convenience but at present I am so busy with that railroad and corporation case that my time is almost completely utilized. Yes, sir, I certainly shall."

"Turning to the man behind him, he said: 'Now, what can I do for you?'"

"I beg pardon sir," cried the young man. "I've come to connect your phone."

That Child Of Yours

By Ruth Matthews

A problem which has caused great tumult and anguish among average mothers is that of proper companions for their boys and girls.

Democracy is a great theory, many mothers tell me, but it spells a lot of trouble when applied too freely to children.

There is Gladys, the janitor's daughter, who is a soiled little rowdy with destructive tendencies. She commits horrifying acts with a calm naturalness.

Gladyses have caused consternation and dismay throughout the realm of motherhood. One can't get away from them.

And there is Johnnie, the ice boy, who has a passion for expediting and whose vocabulary has a sophistication and a choice-ness which fascinates your own boy.

They Can't Be Avoided

Johnnies, too, are almost inescapable, move where you may. And since the Gladyses and the Johnnies cannot be removed, the matter must be treated from your side, as it were. While you cannot mend the ways of Gladys, yet you can set up a strong protection within your own child if you have the patience.

Without preaching snobbishness to your Anne and your Donald, you yet can give them a consciousness of their quality. You can build up a splendid self-respect in them which will stave off quite successfully any ill effects from the proximity of Gladys and Johnnie.

Appeal to Child's Pride

Seek out Anne's little points of pride wherein she most differs from Gladys. Praise her for her soft voice and tell her you hope she will never be as raucous as Gladys. Be subtle in such dealings.

BEAUTY HINTS

By Peggy Hopkins Joyce

The eyes are the life of the face, and require the greatest attention. I strongly advise plucking the eyebrows if they grow across the bridge of the nose or up into the forehead untidily. But avoid the fine line affected by some of the cheaper types of girls for this looks both unnatural and ugly. If you use mascara—and use it, by all means if it will enhance the appearance of your eyes—be sure to use it moderately.

Be careful to brush the upper eyelashes up and the lower ones down, so that they will show against the white of the skin. The wide-eyed type should have especially up-curling lashes. The eyebrow pencil is not usually needed so greatly as some girls like to think. Only blondes, with indefinite brow lines should use

THE BEGINNING—THE END

If you ever doubt love's reality, just notice how it will sometimes make a girl whose finger-tips have never touched dish-water, go into a little two-by-four flat, doll it up, and make hash and fry potatoes for her hard working husband. Yes, and do it with a radiant air—at least for a while. The length of time this will last will depend on how much married she is.

So if you want to know something about the power of love, never ask a cold psychologist. A recent bride will give you a more generous answer. May she ever be thus, for the greatest hardship that can ever strike a home, is the loss of love!

When a decidedly clever girl becomes a domestic wife there is always a reason for looking for an explosion.

PROVERB:—I saw that look on her face which comes only once or twice in a lifetime—when a woman is perfectly happy and the air is full of trumpets and gorgeously colored fire, and the earth truns into cloud because she loves and is loved.—Kipling.

(World-Famous Inventor)

"My mother was a real Spartan, although she was at the same time loving kindness itself. She knew her duty and she did it, and her life was a constant example to us children of executive duty."

"There is an old Sandwich Island saying that if strong be the frame of the mother the sons shall make the laws of the people. Although small in stature my mother was a giant in strength. She was able to do more things, and do them well, than any other woman I ever saw, and we children, in helping her with her multitudinous duties, were taught how to do things well ourselves."

"Her dictum to us always was: 'Go ahead and fear nobody and nothing, as long as you do your best.' Well, I have tried to follow her counsel and advice."

"My mother knew the nature and medicinal qualities of all the herbs in the field. There seemed to be nothing she wasn't handy at. She could spin and weave and crochet, make a silk blouse or an axe handle; and through her example of self-reliance she taught us to be self-reliant."

"She was a real pioneer. She belonged to the time and the type when the wife of the family had to turn her hand at anything which came along. It never occurred to us youngsters that there could be anything within the range of human possibilities which our mother could not do, and nothing that she did not know how to do in the best way. Consequently she gave us big confidence in ourselves, in going forward to face the world and work out our future."

Famous Unsolved Mysteries

FATE OF THE "MARY CELESTE"

What became of the captain and crew of the "Mary Celeste"? Over fifty years have passed and this mystery remains as insoluble today as it did in early December, 1872, when Captain Boyce of the "Del Gratia" sighted the "Mary Celeste" drifting aimlessly. Getting no response to his hail, he boarded her and the spectacle that met his eyes was so peaceful as to be uncanny. For no apparent reason she had been abandoned.

Records indicate that on November 7, 1873, Captain Briggs, who hailed from Marion, Mass., accompanied by his wife and his two-year old child, and a crew of seven men, set sail on the "Mary Celeste" from New York, bound for Genoa with a cargo of alcohol. Never again were any of them seen.

Meal Half Prepared
When Captain Boyce boarded the ship, everything was in order. A half prepared meal stood in the kitchen. A bit of unfinished sewing on the table, and an unopened bottle of medicine beside the captain's plate, testified that the vessel had been hastily but peacefully deserted.

That it had not been the work of pirates was evidenced by the fact that the sailor's chests with clothing and money was untouched. The skipper's gold watch hung beside his berth undisturbed. It was clearly not a case of starvation for food and water there was plenty.

Why had the crew forsaken her? Where had they gone? The answer to the latter question seems simple. Either they had boarded another ship or they had gone into the sea. The life boats of the "Mary Celeste" hung in their places. But the reason for the abandonment has been the basis of many curious speculations. Some of the more romantically inclined have advanced the theory that some gigantic sea serpent had arisen and towered over the ship, snatching each member of the crew as he emerged from the hatchway.

Alcohol Casks Intact
Others suggested that the casks of alcohol had sprung a leak and that the fumes had driven the captain and crew into the sea, but investigation proved the cargo to be intact.

The theory that Captain Briggs

JOHN HOWARD PAYNE'S UNREQUITED LOVE

The writer of "Home Sweet Home" was one in the cast of a triangular love episode. The other two were Mary Wollstonecraft, the young widow of the poet Shelley, and Washington Irving.

Payne loved Mary Shelley but he found her heart was more occupied with Irving. On the other hand Irving was not in a receptive mind because a Philadelphia girl, Matilda Hoffman, whom he had dearly loved, died and left him inconsolable.

Eventually Payne told Mary Shelley that he loved her, and this declaration he made in the following terms:

"... A flash, as it were, gave me a thorough impression of all which I have since found confirmed, of the beauty of your heart and intellect. I then knew nothing of you, but what I had heard of about you as a child, excepting what had been misrepresented, so that I had the satisfaction of taking up my impression entirely unswayed. I met you afterwards and left with a determination not to trust myself to the danger of your acquaintance—with a wish, if you can understand such a wish, to pay you the same homage as I would the memory of one whom I had loved, but whose form, were it to appear would only perplex me—

"I did not meet you again and presumed too much on my courage, forgetting that the rein once given to the sexes they are apt involuntarily to spurn the curb and gallop over the prescribed boundary. The error was perfectly gratuitous. I told you I knew my danger and could laugh at it. I am afraid now that the laugh is not on my side."

"JOHN HOWARD PAYNE"

Payne was an actor, dramatist and writer of librettos for comic operas. He left nothing of great importance and would hardly be known today were it not for his poem, "Home Sweet Home," which was written for an English opera called "Clari, the Maid of Milan," and set to music by Sir Henry Bishop. But Payne's part, the composition must be put above Bishop's for the latter derived his melody from an old Italian song.

The Poet's Attend Hop
Poe, who has been following the swallow
Let's go outside and have a drink,
As I contemplate the brightness,
Extraordinary lightness,
Not to mention certain tightness
In this room.

And the thought that from it
Is like the ringing of bells
Of the bells, bells, bells,
Hell's bells.
Noyes, who is acquiring the same idea:
My aching head seems leaden,
And the music seems to deaden,
Let's go outside and have a drink,
I'm thirsty as a sinner,
I'm sure a drink would do us good,
Would do us good, would do us good,
I'm sure a drink would do us good,
It's been so long since dinner.
—Amherst Lord Jeff.

had gone suddenly insane and had forced them all into the sea is also highly improbable in view of the fact that there was no evidence of a struggle and also because the seven male members of the crew would have had no difficulty in overcoming him.

LEWIS STONE HEADS CAST AT RICHMOND

Marion Fairfax' world's only woman screen producer, selected a most admirable cast to usher in her first production "Old Loves and New" which enjoyed a premiere at the Richmond Theatre last night.

The ever popular Lewis Stone heads the cast of this adaptation of E. M. Hull's celebrated novel, "The Desert Heart." Barbara Bedford, a charming girl and consummate capable actress, plays opposite him. Tully Marshall, the "man of the thousand faces," has a small but intensely dramatic part. Others in the cast are Walter Hudson, Kathleen McDonald, Arthur Rankin, Ann Rork and Albert Conti.

It is superb entertainment, this "Old Loves and New"—a film replete with colorful situations, engrossing love interest, action and suspense, and a setting in the Nevada East that brings the mirage-like splendor of that far-off land before the eye in a glittering panorama of desert and tropical brilliance.

Lewis Stone stands out in new relief in the role of the faith-shattered Englishman who buries himself among the Arabs of Algeria and becomes the "shepherd" of their physical and spiritual life. Stone invests himself in his inveterate somber reserve like a warrior strapping to his battle armor and throws himself into this stirring role with a new fire and force.

Miss Fairfax has taken the melodramatic ingredients of the book and compounded them with deft skill with the beautiful love story and knowledge of native character that won this work by popular Mrs. Hull the palm of her finest story.

Other features include "Riders of the Purple Cows," a Ralph Graves comedy, "Topics of the Day," and "Aesop's Fables."

NEW THOUGHT IN TRIANGLES AT THE CALIFORNIA

Something new in triangles, with three men creating a situation unique in dramatic drama makes the "First National" offering, "In Every Woman's Life," with Virginia Valli and a notable supporting cast, one of the most unusual offerings of the season.

This timely dramatic play opened yesterday at the California Theatre and roused the audience to a high pitch of excitement. It is doubtful if anything quite as dramatic as a scene revolving around the paralytic husband, who sees his wife attacked by his former rival for her hand, has ever been depicted on the screen.

There is plenty of variety of locale "In Every Woman's Life." Some striking shipboard scenes and a reproduction of Sherry's famous night life center of New York, at the height of an extravagant millionaire's party, are among these.

Besides the singularly gifted Miss Valli, the cast comprises Lloyd Hughes, Marc McDermott, Stuart Holmes, George Fawcett, Ralph Lewis and Vera Lewis. Irving Cummings directed the production for M. C. Levee.

Other features on the same program include "Long Fliv The King," a Charlie Chase comedy; "Charleston Lesson No. 1," the first of a series of four lessons showing how to dance the "Charleston"; "Topics of the Day," and "Aesop's Fables."

Tucker Takes Out Permit to Build New Home

Pryce Roberts secured a permit to remodel his residence on the north side of Roosevelt avenue between Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets. He will add two apartments to the second floor at a cost of $6,000. N. G. Holmes is the contractor.

Amelia Orsini was issued a permit to make alterations to a cottage on the north side of Wall avenue between Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth streets to cost $45.

P. Kosinski will erect a garage at the cost of $50 on the east side of Twelfth street between Barrett and Roosevelt avenues.

G. C. Gorman secured a permit to repair the fire damage to a cottage on the south side of Nevil avenue between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets costing $300. A. H. Rose is the contractor.

R. J. Buckman will build a two-car garage on the north side of Barrett avenue between Fourth and Fifth streets at a cost of $200.

R. McLennen was issued a permit to build an enclosed porch on the west side of Third street between Barrett and Ripley avenues at a cost of $250. D. A. Dodge is the contractor.

STATE MAKES BIG SAVING ON AUTO PLATES

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 23.—Auto-plate license plates for 1927 will cost the taxpayers of California approximately $50,000 less than those being used this year and $95,000 less than those used in 1925.

This saving was made possible by the award of the 1927 contract to the Kiltie Manufacturing company of Los Angeles, the division of motor vehicles announced today. The division is now preparing to receive the first consignment of the plates which will arrive about September 15.

Under the competitive system of bidding employed, the division received a bid of 7.22 cents per pair of plates from the Los Angeles firm. This year's contract was made on the basis of 10.9 cents a pair, a difference of 3.6 cents per pair. Plates for 1925 were purchased at 14.2 cents per pair.

The saving thus made will be used for repair and maintenance work on state and county highways, said Will H. Marsh, chief of the division, who expressed elation over the price secured.

The new plates will have a dark maroon background with buff-colored letters and numerals. To give them greater advertising value the word "California" will be spelled out and plates above one million will display the seven figures instead of letter prefixes. The contract calls for 1,500,000 pair and more will be ordered later.

Three still-born cases are not included in this amount. There were five coroner's cases.

Sixty-five milk analyses were made and the total examination made during the month amounted to 138.

Brunscher Final Rites Are Held At County Seat

MARTINEZ, Aug. 23.—At memorial services conducted here on Sunday tribute was paid to J. F. Brunscher, Martinez trustee and deputy coroner, whose death occurred Thursday.

Mourners representing every civic and fraternal organization in the city and county officials crowded the Methodist church to hear the services read by Rev. W. H. Hannaford, Rev. N. F. Sanderson and Edson D. Hale of the Congregational church.

In their eulogy of Brunscher the ministers paid high tribute to a sterling character which placed service above self.

A great mass of flowers covered the bier and the altar was banked with blossoms.

Brunscher died in Fabolia Hospital, Oakland, where he had been confined for several months from an illness resulting from a spinal infection.

The body was shipped last night to Long Beach, Brunscher's former home, for burial.

Permanent State Exhibit Planned By County C. C.

The establishment of a permanent state exhibit, housing every county exhibit shown during the California State Fair, at Sacramento is urged by the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Contra Costa county which held a session late last week at Pittsburg.

The coming legislature will be asked to provide for the creation of such a permanent exhibit. President R. V. Davis of Antioch, of the Associated Chambers of Commerce, together with State Senator W. R. Sharkey and Assemblyman R. P. Easley, will act as a committee to take the matter before the legislature.

According to the Associated Chambers of Commerce one building at the state fair which is used as permanent state fair headquarters, the year round, is ideal for a permanent exhibit building. The matter came before the association following a report of George P. Upham, secretary of the Eastern Contra Costa Chamber of Commerce, as to Contra Costa county's exhibit this year which embraces a wonderful relief map and carefully planned exhibit sponsored by the Lions clubs of Contra Costa county.

The exhibit of Contra Costa county is the finest ever prepared by this county and the Associated Chambers of Commerce feel that it should be a permanent affair and not merely used eight days during the state fair. Should the plan for a permanent state exhibit building fail, efforts will be made to arrange for the installation of the Contra Costa exhibit at some other point where it may benefit the county the year around.

Another important action taken by the Contra Costa association was endorsement and a pledge of co-operation with the general committee arranging for the big celebration May 20, 21 and 22 next when the Carquinez bridge, the largest toll bridge in the world, is opened to traffic. The bridge connects Contra Costa and Solano county at Crockett and Vallejo. The resolution adopted will be forwarded to W. P. Laidlaw, chairman of the Crockett committee at Crockett and acting chairman of the general committee.

For the purpose of finding out whether there would be enough interest to warrant the holding of a Contra Costa county fair, President Roy V. Davis will call together a general committee, representing the chambers of commerce, the municipalities and the allied industries of the county, at an early date.

Pittsburg's big Columbus Day celebration, October 12th, was heartily endorsed by the organization. The next meeting of the association will be held at the Hotel Carquinez, Friday September 17, under the auspices of the Richmond Chamber of Commerce. Invitation to meet in Richmond was extended the organization by B. S. Sanders of the Richmond Chamber of Commerce, representing President P. M. Sanford.

Others in attendance at the Pittsburg meeting were R. V. Davis, Antioch, president; R. B. Borland, president of the Martinez chamber; R. G. Ray, secretary of the Walnut Creek chamber; George P. Upham, secretary of the East Contra Costa chamber; George C. Murray, vice-president Pittsburg chamber; Harry A. Barnes, secretary Pittsburg chamber, and Dr. J. B. Blackburn of the East Contra Costa chamber.

Garage Plans Are Altered

As P. Gheridela, of the Universal hotel, had changed his plans for the construction of five garages on the rear of his property on Pullman avenue, no action was taken last night by the city council on his request for a special permit to erect frame garages. Gheridela after a conference with City Building Inspector, A. J. Hurley decided to build the garages of reinforced concrete in accordance with the building ordinance.

STREET LIGHT ASKED
Requesting that a street light be installed at the intersection of Sixteenth street and Bissell avenue, residents of that vicinity last night presented a petition to the city council. The request was signed by twenty-six residents. The matter was referred to the light committee for one week.

Free Help

To millions who needlessly suffer

Here is a new help—a new discovery—which physicians are prescribing now to millions.

It is a gland secretion derived from beef livers. It stimulates the liver quickly, multiplies the flow of bile. Modern research proves that cathartics never do that.

Bile floods the bowels, keeps them open. The results come over night.

Bile combats the bowel germs which feed poisons to the blood. It is an antiseptic. Stopping those poisons corrects countless ill conditions.

Bile is a digestant. It corrects bowel indigestion. Learn what it means to you—for constipation, for impure blood, for indigestion. The results will amaze and delight you. Dioxol tablets embody this liver gland secretion. Each tablet represents ten drops.

"Clip this advertisement. Take it to our Special Agent, La Moine Drug Co., and he will give you a liberal sample of Dioxol free."

ther who is rushing here from Rome.

PASSED PEACEFULLY
(By Universal Service)
By EARL L. SHAUB

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—"Don't pull the curtains down; I'm feeling fine, and I want the sunlight to greet me."

But what Rudolph Valentino mistook for window shades was the darkness of death that settled over him gradually.

"I want the sunlight to greet me," were the last conscious words of the world-famous motion picture actor, who died at ten minutes past noon today.

Father Edward Leonard, Catholic prelate, held a crucifix to the actor's lips as he died. Two minutes before the end Father Leonard administered extreme unction, the last rites of the Roman Catholic church.

At his bedside were George Ullman, his close friend and manager; Joseph Schenck of the United Artists' Corporation; Father Leonard and Father Congello, a friend of Valentino during his boyhood, and his four attending physicians.

During all his conscious moments Valentino was gay-hearted, smiling and courageous. He was as nonchalant at the approach of death as he has always been as he played the lead in his famous pictures.

Death came as the result of gastric ulcers and acute appendicitis, for which he was operated upon a week ago Sunday. The immediate cause of death was septic endocarditis, an inflammation of the lining membrane of the heart.

Long before noon a large crowd had gathered in the street in front of Polyclinic hospital. It was a restless, milling, though silent crowd, composed mostly of women, eager for some word from the sickroom.

When the final announcement came the crowd appeared stunned. They couldn't believe that the hero of millions of motion picture fans—the sheik of the screen—had folded his earthly tent and stolen away to that bourn from which no traveler returns.

The silence was broken by a shriek of grief from a woman. This broke the tension and soon scores of women were weeping openly and unashamed.

The crowd grew and lingered. Many hoped for one last look at the man who had won the love of millions. They lingered to see his body carried from the hospital.

In the meantime preparations were made in the death chamber to remove the body to Campbell's Undertaking parlors. But the crowd in the street was so thick that the body couldn't be taken out the front door.

Police, pretending that the body would be brought out, formed a lane for it and kept up the pretext while hospital attendants took the body in a wicker basket, covered with a gold and white cloth, out the back door to the undertakers unmolested by the throng.

Valentino's body is lying tonight at the undertaker's parlor waiting for instructions from relatives in Italy.

Valentino sank gradually all day. He had only brief moments of consciousness after 9 o'clock when he awoke from a night's sleep induced by drugs. Everything that medical science could do to aid him was done.

Until Saturday it was expected that he would recover. Then came the fatal relapse and his condition declined from that time. His death was expected hourly all day Sunday and during the night. His life was only prolonged by his stamina and vigorous constitution.

At no time did Valentino realize that he was going to die.

During his entire illness he said that he "felt fine" and had no pain. This was one of the things that worried the physicians. They knew that his condition would have been better if he had been in pain.

His assertion, however, can be traced to another cause. Valentino was gay; he was always cheerful—cheerful to the end. He wanted everybody around him to be comfortable. He didn't want any one to worry about him, not even his physicians or nurses.

When he heard that newspaper correspondents were in the hospital waiting for news of his condition he instructed that a room should be turned over to them and equipped with easy chairs and typewriters. He wanted everyone to be comfortable. This was a week ago when everyone expected him to recover.

He always thought he would recover. As late as Sunday evening he was planning a trip to the Maine woods; he thought he would be able to go next week. Up to the very last—as long as he was conscious—he was the most cheerful person in the room.

Just a minute or two after the death had occurred one man in a crowded subway train shouted: "Valentino is dead."

He was immediately surrounded by other passengers eager for details.

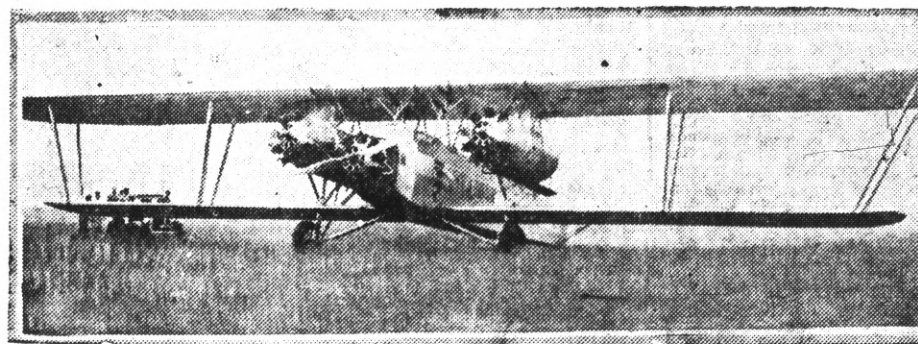

Strangers discussed the death with strangers on the streets and on the platforms of the subway and elevated stations. It was the only topic of conversation during the afternoon.

LIFE OF VALENTINO
By RALPH FRYE
Rudolph Valentino, or more accurately, Rodolfo Guglielmo, Shiek de Luxe of the screen and idol of flappers everywhere, died a long hard row before his arrival in Central Park received Valentino more than one occasion as a guest for the night and more than one restaurant paid him $2 a night and his meals for washing dishes in the days following his arrival in this country.

ARRIVED AT IN
Valentino was eighteen when he arrived here from Italy on November 23, 1913, with only a moderate amount of money, fewer friends in this country and no prospects whatever.

He had, it is true, a profession

Giant Sikorsky Airplane, Tested For Fonck's Non-Stop New York-Paris Flight, Pleases Daring Aviators

This photograph was taken at Roosevelt Field, Long Island, while the Sikorsky plane, in which Capt. Rene Fonck will attempt a non-stop flight from New York to Paris, was being given its preliminary tests. Igor Sikorsky, the designer, was at the controls and Fonck sat beside him. Also on board were alternate pilot, Lieut. Allen P. Stucky, navigator for the proposed flight, and Capt. Homer M. Berry, 1,650 revolutions per minute.

that of landscape architect gained through courses in the Italian Royal College of Agriculture, but, except for one disastrous month in the gardens of Cornelia Blais, estate on Long Island he has never practiced his profession. He was the son of Giovanni Guglielmo, a veterinarian of Castellana, Italy, who died seven years before his arrival here.

"PRETTY WILD"
By his own admission he was a "pretty wild boy" in those days and he gravitated to Broadway night life. Here he learned to dance while spending his small board of money and this fact saved him later, after his failure as an under gardener on the Blais estate.

He had secured a job through an agency and took it, only to find it was a dead end. He had secured a job through an agency and took it, only to find it was a dead end.

BANK FAILURE
Whatever the reason, the graduate of the college of agriculture was a rank failure as an under gardener. It was in the winter houses and either Valentino was unfamiliar with this branch of horticulture or something. At all events he terminated his employment at the end of a month.

Everybody's satisfaction, including his own, and came back to New York. It was at this time that he qualified as a dishwasher in various restaurants.

STARTED DANCING
But at this time his luck appeared to turn for the better. He had so quickly picked up that he was something of a dancer. He was something of a dancer.

Thus it was as a dancer that Valentino first obtained a foothold in this country. Before he left it he was something of a dancer. He was something of a dancer.

HOLLYWOOD LOOMS
At this time, about 1915, Hollywood loomed on the Western horizon as the desirable place for moviemakers and Valentino, like thousands of others, yearned for a chance to get into the movies. The matter of transportation was an obstacle to him as it was to many. But he overcame it by accepting a role in a musical comedy troupe that was headed in that direction.

STRANDED IN S. F.
As luck would have it, the troupe for the trip and collapsed in San Francisco, stranding Valentino within a few hundred miles of his destination, but after selling, or trying to sell bonds in San Francisco for a month or two, he finally arrived at Hollywood.

Here, for three years, the man who was later to be hailed as the greatest lover on the screen lived the precarious life of a movie extra.

SMALL PARTS
Sometimes for a few months he was fortunate enough to get small parts and ate three meals a day. More often he didn't. He admitted that this period was the hardest of his life.

MARRIES JEAN ACKER
It was at this time that he met and married Jean Ackers, his first wife. Miss Ackers, at the time, was little more than an extra, but was in frequent demand. That was in 1918.

Meanwhile Winifred Hudnut, adopted daughter of Richard Hudnut, the perfumer, had arrived in Hollywood as art director and costumer for Mlle. Nazimova, who was about to produce "Camille."

As the day approached for the first rehearsal, Mme. Nazimova discovered that the actor she had cast for the character of Armand, the lover in her play, was not available and she began searching for a substitute. The man she needed was a slim, dark, passionate type who could make love convincingly, but the screen was unable to produce such a type. Then it was Miss Hudnut, or "Natscha" Rambova, as she preferred to be known, thought of Valentino. She said to Nazimova:

FIRST ROLE
"I saw a young man the other day who looks the part of perfection. His name is Valentino."

Mme. Nazimova asked: "But does he know how to make love?"

The lady who was to become the second Mrs. Valentino answered: "How should I know? But he looks as if he might. Why not give him a try-out?"

FOUR HORSEMEN
It was this try-out that decided the fate of Rudolph Valentino. When Camille appeared on the screen the acting of Rudolph Valentino as the lover attracted such attention as to even nearly eclipse the work of the star herself. Then followed his success in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" to which part he was called by the astute Rex Ingram, who had seen his work in "Camille." After that came the Shiek, the picture which gave him his world wide recognition.

IS DIVORCED
But during the rehearsals for Camille little Jean Ackers Valentino believed she had come for him and he had come for her. Between her husband and Miss Winifred Hudnut, there was a great deal of gossip about the studios about the pair and eventually there came into the hands of the wife a photograph of her husband and Miss Hudnut in a most love-like attitude. She brought suit for divorce and secured it in 1922.

Within a year Valentino and Miss Hudnut married.

MORE TROUBLE
It appeared to be a ill started after their return from Mexico where they were wed, the couple found themselves in trouble with the courts. There had nothing before the expiration of Jean Ackers' interdictory decree and court in Los Angeles where the judge held the marriage illegal under the United States laws.

Mrs. Valentino, who went in a hunting lodge owned by her foster father in the Adirondacks where she lived apart from Valentino until the required time had elapsed when they remarried.

GOES ON STRIKE
It was during this time, too, that Valentino had his famous strike on Famous Players over his contract. He had been signed up by this company on a long term contract for a relatively small salary. After he was recognized he attempted to secure an increase, which it is said was denied, and Valentino struck.

For nearly two years he was off the screen before the matter was finally amicably adjusted with Famous Players, who financed him for two pictures and quit.

Meanwhile a little rift in the lute of his matrimonial happiness began to widen into a sizeable puncture.

The truth of the trouble may probably never be known because Valentino told one story and Natscha Rambova another quite at variance with it.

According to Valentino, he wanted a home-going wife and children while his wife desired nothing but a career. Her story is that Valentino whatever he might be, had a home-going wife and children while his wife desired nothing but a career.

TRIAL SEPARATION
Whatever the cause the couple agreed to a trial separation for a year and Mrs. Valentino came East, remained a few days at her Park avenue apartment and sailed for Europe. Last December news came that she had divorced him in Paris with the incidental information that, having showed up in a generation and by concealing his identity from Parisian lawyer, Valentino secured the divorce for $160.

Hardly had the decree been made public than rumors of another marriage for the shiek began circulating. Of the ladies mentioned, Mae Murray and Pola Negri were the best known and both were definitely announced as betrothed to Valentino.

Pola Negri admitted that she and Rudolph had agreed upon a four-months "trial engagement" at the end of which they would marry if their love endured. That was in March 1925. Shortly after Valentino said that he had made a bet of $50,000 with Manuel Roedel, husband of Agnes Ayres, that he would not marry before 1930.

TROUBLE IN ITALY
During the trial of his wife's divorce suit last December, Valentino was in Italy where he got into trouble with the courts because of his announced intention of becoming an American citizen. The resentment became so bitter that a movement was started to boycott films in which he appeared as a protest against his expatriation. After a hostile demonstration in Italy Valentino, who had gone to Paris, wired to Mussolini an explanation of his motives in renouncing his Italian citizenship.

He also made a reply to an attack in an Italian paper that he was a deserter during the war. He exhibited an honorable discharge from the Italian Army as well as evidence that he had applied for and been rejected by the British, American and French armies for physical disability. He had imperfect vision in the left eye. In November 1925, he took out his first citizenship papers in the United States.

CHALLENGES EDITOR
Valentino's most recent appearance in the news resulted from his offer to fight a duel with fists with an unidentified contributor to the Chicago Tribune, who had written an editorial entitled "Pink Powder Puffs" directed against him. It contained the implication that Valentino was effeminate and the latter immediately challenged the author to a fistie duel.

Up to Valentino, however, the editor had not replied to the challenge.

WILL BE MISSED
Rudolph Valentino, whatever critics may think of his art, has behind a wide public who will miss him and his work. Considered as successful from the box office and popular viewpoint, few pictures have the vogue of "The Shiek," "The Four Horsemen," and "Monsieur Beaucaire." As to their artistic merit or the artistic merit of Valentino's work, critics of this and future days can decide, but whether or not he was a great artist, he was undoubtedly a great favorite.

An Ounce of Prevention—

If ample protection is not provided for personal belongings of great value, disastrous consequences must be expected. Why take unnecessary risks when for a small sum a fire-proof and burglar-proof safe deposit box may be rented from the Mercantile Trust Company of California? Bond's stocks, deeds, jewelry and silverware are a few of the important items that are best protected in the Mercantile vault. An ounce of prevention is worth many pounds of cure.
